MAIN PUBLICATIONS

He is the author of 155 scientific publications. His initial research activity focused on the pathology and diagnostics of infectious diseases — with particular reference to HIV-related diseases of the central nervous system — and on experimental models in the immunological field. More recently, his research has significantly expanded to the field of oncology and advanced medical technologies, with a strong focus on the integration of artificial intelligence and computational pathology in diagnostics, augmented reality in surgery and the role of carbon ion therapy in oncological hadrontherapy.
